Shahak: Mistake to seize journalists' records

ARIEH O'SULLIVAN and RAINE MARCUS

TEL AVIV Magistrate's Court Judge Gideon Barak yesterday issued an interim injunction barring the Military Police from making any use of reporters' phooe records and other documents it seized under another judge's warrant the day before.

Barak's order countermanding one issued by Judge George Kara came io response to an appeal by the Association of Israel Journalists and Israel Radio reporters Carmela Menasbe and Yoni Ben-

Amid mounting controversy over the method used to try to stem leaks to journalists from army brass, the IDF Spokesman hinted yesterday that the orders to seize the phone records came directly from Chief of General Staff Lt.-Gen. Amnon Lipkin-

Interviewed oo Army Radio. 1DF Spokesman Brig.-Geo. Amos Gilad said the move to ob-tain the records came after consulting with Judge Advocate-Geoeral Brig.-Gen. Ori Shoham and receiving approval from the "highest authority in the IDF."

Shahak, interviewed last night on Channel 1's Mabat evening newsreel, said that, "In retrospect. I think that in such a case l would think it not correct to obtain a journalist's phone numbers - we should have looked for other ways. It would have been better to behave with much greater caution." The Military Police sbould have consulted "much more senior personnel than those who made the decision," be said. Shahak said another mistake was "insufficient sensitivity" to the fact that the Military Police had seized "mucb more" information than what the court had been asked to authorize. He said the investigators should have given back what they did not need.

Channel 2 news reported last night that Feldman came to Peres asking for solutions to the haredi housing crunch, and to set early elec-tions for the Bnei Brak Municipality, currently governed by an Interior Ministry-appointed body. Peres reportedly made a similar request to Yosef wheo he met with him last week. It was that meeting that precipitated last night's meet-ing between Yosef and Netanyahu.

Meir Porush, the new bead of the United Torah Judaism list, said on Channel 1's Mabat newsreel last night it is unlikely the party's Council of Sages will decide whom its followers should vote for, or whether they should vote for any candidate for prime minister, until after Shavuot - five days before the elections. In a related development, Degel Hatorah and Agudat Yisrael signed an agreement last night to run again as one faction, the United Torah Judaism Party. This came less than a day after Degel Hatorah signed up as a separate party with the Central Elections Commission, planning to run on its own.

The sticking point was the position on the joint list of each party's representatives. Aguda wanted the first and third position on the list, and a mid-term rotation with Degei for the fourth slot, while Degel objected to the rotation, wanting the second and fourth slots for the full Knesset term. In the end, Aguda won out. The joint list is headed by Porush, followed by Avraham Ravitz from Degel, Shmuel Halpert from Agudah, Moshe Gafni from Degel, and Avraham Lazersoo of Aguda Yisrael.

Meanwhile, Shas's Council of Torah Sages selected the party's Knesset slate early yesterday morning, leaving current MK Moshe Maiya off the list. The slate will be headed by Aryeh Deri, followed by Aryeh Gamliel, Rafael Pinhasi, Shlomo Benizri, Eli Shai, head of the party's educational system, El Hama'ayan; Yitzhak Cohen, the deputy director of El Ha-ma'ayan; and David Azulai, appointed head of the Nahal Iyon Regional Council.

There were no reports of shelling, and it is believed the casualties may have been caused by either mines or roadside bombs. Hizbullah Radio announced that four roadside bombs had been detonated in the area, and

Yosef: No endorsement for PM

SHAS spiritual leader Ovadia Yosef last night promised Likud leader Binyamin Netanyahu that he would not endorse either of the two candidates for prime minister.

Likud sources said they were pleased by the announcement, as they understood it to mean Yosef would stay neutral and give his followers freedom to vote as they wished. However, the sources noted, this did not negate the possibilty that Yosef would at some point tell his followers not to vote for Meanwhile, Netanyahu repeated his vow to

The meeting with Yosef was eagerly awaited in the Likud, where there is growing ner-vousness about Prime Minister Shimon Peres's efforts to convince haredi rahhis to instruct their followers not to vote in the prime ministerial race. Labor thereby seeks to deny Netanyahu the support he is seen as enjoying in the religious community.

A top Likud source said that "we cannot imagine any haredi leader would instruct his people not to exercise their democratic right. In the end, we believe the haredim will vote, but Labor's behavior here should be noted. It is not calling on people to vote for Peres, but are asking for instructions that will prevent people from voting at all."

The feeling in the Likud is that the haredi community will not take a clear stand until shortly before the election, making the most of the suspense gripping both sides.

At his meeting with Yosef, Netanyahu asked for his support. But his people did not expect a commitment, and it was clear that Netanyahu brought David Levy with him to the meeting with Netanyahu, as well as the Likud's newest star, Yitzhak Mordechai, Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert, and MK Ovadia Eli, the party's liaison to the religious community. HISTADRUT Chairman MK Amir Peretz is setting up a personal campaign staff to mobilize Histadrut activists to campaign for Shimon Peres.

The campaign staff, decided on at a meeting between Peretz and Peres, will be financed by Labor and conducted from headquarters provided by the party.

THE Third Way has reportedly paid a large sum for a study of possible solutions to the problem of the Golan Heights in the event of peace with Syria. The outline plan does not include territorial concessions, according to party leaders, but they were re-Inctant to reveal details yesterday.

In keeping with the reason the party was founded, it kicked off its electoral campaign yester-day with a tour of the Golan

Without specifying the ideas contained in the study, party leaders said some of the conclusions were "far-reaching." Apparently the study suggests the possibility of a demilitarized zone on both the Israeli and Syrian sides of the border.

"The program is similar to that prepared by the Foreign Ministry under Shimon Peres. It assumes the possibility that, although it's not happened yet, there will one day be a New Middle East with true peaceful relations. A peace not built on destruction, evictions, or population transfers but on cooperation to the benefit of the four sides," said party No. 2 Yehuda Harel.

The Golan Heights borders four countries: Israel, Lebanon, Syria, and Jordan.

The party is not saying how much it paid for the 100-page study, which is considered a basis for a plan for future relations with Syria.

Peace Now

SIX Peace Now activists were arrested yesterday while demonstrating at a ground-breaking ceremony for a new mall in Karnei

Shomron. The six, carrying signs that read "Yes to peace, no to the mall," were detained, five for disturbing the peace and one for attacking a policeman. Shouting matches erupted between the protesters and some Karnei Shomron residents at the ceremony.

The six, including Peuce Now political secretary Mossi Raz and spokesman Alon Arnon, were released last night.

Raz said from the police lockup in Kedumim that the police acted brutally. A Peace Now spokesman said that a complaint will be filed with the Justice Ministry unit that investigates charges of police brutality.

Hundreds of settlers came to the ground-breaking for the mall, which has been hailed by senlement leaders as significant for the region both politically and economically.

The initial investment in the 6,000 square-meter mall is $4.5 million, with the money coming from Swiss investor Nissan Haeshuri, Raz said that the Peace Now activists came to "protest the settlers' celebration. They are mocking the government that started with declarations of a settlement freeze and drying up the settle-ments, and is finishing with massive building. This government has brought more settlers to the territories than any other govern-Karnei Shomron Regional Council head Yehuda Lieberman said that the protest did not spoil the ceremony. It was enjoyable for me to stand at a ground-breaking ceremony and watch someone else demonstrate, while I build, create, and develop," he said.

CHRYSLER AMERICA'S FLAGSHIP CARS.

When an auto-maker produces such stars as Vision, Stratus, Jeep Cherokee, Voyager and Neon, no wonder Americans are crazy about Chrysler.

There are some things that Americans know how to do best. Chryster, the giant American auto-maker, is a good example of this. With decades of experience, modern technology, superb finish, excellent performance and special emphasis on sately, Chrysler is regarded as the flagship of the American auto industry. And with stars such as these, it's no wonder, Vision, the best executive car in Israel today. Stratus, the new Israeli status symbol with unique lechnology, design and style. Jeep Cherokee, the only car in the world worthy of carrying the mythological name "Jeep". Voyager, the widest selling minivan in the world. Neon, the family car that is electrifying the country. Come in to a Chrysler dealership, and you will understand why America is crazy about Chrysler.

Source: Rostenkowski to get 17 months in plea deal

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former US Rep. Dan Rostenkowski has agreed to plead guilty to two federal corruption charges in return for a recommendation from prosecutors for a 17-month prison term and $100,000 fine, a source close to the case said yesterday.

Rostenkowski could be in court as early as this week to enter the plea to charges that effectively ended his political career, said the source, who requested anonymity. No hearing has been scheduled, Rostenkowski, 68, a Chicago Democrat, lost his bid for re-election to a 19th term in November 1994 after he was charged five months earlier with 17 felony counts. He allegedly plundered nearly $700,000 from the government and had ghost employees kick back paychecks to his office. He was charged with mail fraud.

NEW YORK (AP) - More than 11 between black youths and a white engineer in a New York City subway triggered a nationwide debate about urban crime, race, vigilantism and fear, a $50 million lawsuit goes to trial this week.

The lawsuit against subway runman Bernhard Goetz was filed by Darrell Cabey, one of four teenagers shot by Goetz on December 22, 1984. A pre-trial hearing was set for yesterday, with jury selection to follow.

Cabey, now 30, suffered brain damage and was paralyzed. He now has the mental capacity of an eight-year-old.

Cabey's case is simple: Goetz was a racist who needlessly shot the four black youths. After wounding Cabey, Goetz walked up to him and delivered the paralyzing gun-shot, amounting, "You don't look too bad, here's another."

Goetz's defense is just as plain:
He fired in self-defense when approached by four menacing moggers who tried to shake him down for $5. He declined to expound on that when reached by telephone last week, saying he was "too busy" to talk.

From the day he pulled his nickel-plated Smith and Wesson 38-caliber handgun until the end of his criminal trial three years later. Goetz was front page nows. He was acquitted of attempted murder, but spent 81/2 months in pail on a weapons conviction.

TUNCELI, Turkey

TURKISH security officials said yesterday that 90 Kurdish guerril-las and 27 soldiers were killed in three days of some of the bloodiest fighting in a 12-year-old separatist rebel campaign.

The clashes put a severe strain on a unilateral cease-fire declared by the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK) rebels last December but

The regional governor's office in the city of Diyarbakir said 90 PKK fighters and 27 troops died in clashes in the mountainous north of Diyarbakir province and in the neighboring Bingol province.

Peres's invidious comparison

PRIME Minister Shimon Peres seems to have decided to follow a campaign strategy which avers that a Likud victory is a victory for Hamas and the Teberan avatollahs. What the electorate is asked to believe is that the Likud, like Iran and its proteges, wants the collapse of the peace process. Ergo, a vote for the Likud is a vote for Israel's most implacable enemies. Peres said as much at a Labor Party meeting earlier this week, in a Jerusalem Post interview published today, and on various other

To say that this line is indecent and demagogic is merely to touch the surface of the problem. Implying that the Likud does not want peace is equivalent to the charge that Labor wants the destruction of Israel. Both are totally unacceptable libels, which do not belong even in the most heated campaign rhetoric.

But what may be more worrisome is Peres's inability to distinguish between peace and the Oslo agreements. Hamas, Islamic Jihad, and Hizbullah are not opposed to the Oslo process. They are openly and overtly supportive of what it has wrought: Israel's withdrawal from what they consider "occupied territory." They would like to see a faster and more complete withdrawal, and -above all - they want to take credit for it. They believe the "armed struggle" has forced Israel to withdraw, and they are convinced that only through armed action can Israel be forced to make more meaningful Unlike these Islamic forces, Arafat believes that Israel can be made to surrender territory more effectively through negotiations. But there is no difference between their perception of the final goal, the dismantling of Israel, and his. He has made it clear in virtually every utterance he has made before Arab audiences.

To liken the differences between Arafat and the Islamists to the dispute between Labor and the Likud is not only a political obscenity. It betrays an unfortunate inability to understand the dynamics of Palestinian aspirations. And it is this inability on Peres's part, rather than his odious campaign tactics, which should worry

Childish but dangerous game

TORTH Korea's gray Orwellian leaders have never been credited with much imagination, but their attempt this week to emulate China's hullying of Taiwan at elec-tion time marks a new level of childishness in international diplomacy.

Prohably no one outside the region other than experts would have heen aware that South Korea has elections this week and that President Bill Clinton will be visiting Seoul the following week. North Korea's ludicrous game of sending soldiers to march in and out of the demilitarized zone, and its decision to stop honoring the 43year-old Korean armistice agreement, has shunted both routine events in the South into the headlines while winning attention for the illtempered, dangerous child up north.

The North Koreans, follow the old Stalinist principle that any international agreement is useful only as long as it remains too risky to tear it up. Neither international law nor morality have any hearing on such accords. The tiresome tyrants in Pyongyang must think the world has forgotten their unilateral decision to pull out of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, which sparked the previous international crisis over the Korean peninsula last year. It certainly has not forgotten that the North Koreans' petulance on the issue led to the United States, South Korea, and Japan setting up a consortium to raise $4 billion to replace North Korea's dangerous nuclear reactors with new models.

The new and contrived agitation over the demilitarized zone follows so transparently on China's show of force against Taiwan as to be laughable. The real joke is that, while China is a mighty and legitimate state that must be handled seriously, North Korea is nothing more than a beggar turned mugger. In an individual, such attempts to exact money and favors from the hard-working world around it would be called extortion.

Some Korea-watchers think North Korea's irrational behavior is a symptom of a dying regime. It can no longer keep its people in a vacuum, ignorant of the rich and successful South that taunts "the workers' paradise" which has a medieval economy, rampant famme, and abject poverty to show for the 50 years of glorious marching alongside heroic great leaders.

The regime may be near its end, but a wounded hyena is dangerous, and a suicidal rampage across the border by North Korea's millionatrong army is not an impossibility. Given the state of the North's ancient armaments and its troops' miserable condition, such a military adventure would be doomed to failure. But it would nonetheless be a serious new explosion of war in an unstable region.

Diplomatic crisis managers cannot treat North Korea as a state with a coherent government or policy. When Pyongyang marches 150 troops in and out of the demilitarized zone to carry out theatrical defense maneuvers, it threatens no one on the southern side. But it is a serious violation of the very touchy 1953 armistice that halted the Korean War, and it raises acute tensions. While South Koreans know they and the Americans would humiliate and dismantle the North in a conventional war, they have good reason to fear the victory would be politically and economically Pyrrhic when the South came to foot the hill for salvaging the. ruins of the communist state.

Insofar as there is any planned policy behind the North's latest unilateral abrogation of an agreement, it is probably directed at attracting more attention from Washington. It is also providing a useful circus to divert the hungry masses at home. Pyongyang has long hinted it wants to scrap the sterile armistice, which froze the war but left it unresolved, and replace it with a hilateral peace treaty with the United States. A treaty would hring suffocating North Korea some financial oxygen. North Korea's nominal leader Kim Jong-il has failed to establish his authority, particularly with the military, and the dangerous game on the border may merely reflect a dangerous power struggle in Pyong-

If this hrinkmanship is meant to make such points to President Clinton or throw South Korea's election into disarray, the North is making a serious mistake and fails to understand even the most hasic elements of how democratic systems work. Whatever unrealistic hope the North might have of any president ahandoning Washington's 50-year-old support for South Korea, it can forget it in the case of Clinton, and doubly so in election year.

North Korea's success with the nuclear blackmail, which won it a golden handout, may have led its leaders to assume a similar ploy with a threat of war might work again. While Pyongyang is husy trying to score irrelevant points off its southern enemy, it should take note of the point Clinton made during the Taiwan crisis, when be did not hesitate to send in the full might of the Pacific Fleet to protect a less important ally than Seoul against a more formidable bully than North Korea.

TRAFFIC FATALITIES

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR I

Sir, - I wisb to correct the erroneous statement of Minister of Transport Israel Kessar at Beit Hanassi about traffic fatalities, as reported in your edition of March 12. Not for the first time the road safety advisers of both the minister and the president have deliberately tried to hoodwink them and the general public, by misinformation.

It is patently dishonest to compare the number of road deaths to the number of population. The correct comparison applied by responsible bodies all over the world is the number of deaths to vebicle kilometers driven. For example the number of people killed over every billion vebicle kilometers driven in 1994 is 23 for Germany, 20 for Israel, 12 for the US and 11 for the UK, the latter two countries having a drink-anddrive problem. The latest figures published by the International Road Federation in Geneva show that Israel and Germany head the list of deaths for every 100 million vehicle

The parliamentary system is the only regime in which opposition to the government is an integral part of the governmental system itself. This would help us avoid the false notion that the two major political parties favor similar solutions for the national

The truth is that there are few parliamentary countries in the world in which the two largest parties are as distant from each other on fundamental issues as the Likud is from Labor.

Some writers are impressed by the frequency with which Binyamin Netanyahn now speaks of "peace." They would be less impressed if they would read the report in Ha'aretz (March 29) of the Likud leader's statement to the Habad movement. This is what Netanyahu said:

"A Likud government will establish more and more settlements in the territories from which Israeli forces have with--drawn. "The first thing that we shall do will be to restore to our hands the exclusive responsibility for the security of the country and of its inhabitants. The IDF will be the only ruler with full freedom to act anywhere in every place." When asked if this policy would hring about the explosion of the peace agreement, Netanyahn replied: "What peace agreement are you talking about? Where does it exist?" He added "I will not shake Arafat's hand. I shall make this clear in advance." The peace process which Netanyahu describes airily as nonexistent is the one espoused national and regional consensus that has ever taken root in the Middle East. Netanyahu speaks and acts as though Israel has had no success in securing respect for Israel's basic rights in this region. It is not possible to shake hands with a clenched fist and Israel does not have to agonize about the absence of peace during the years when the! Arab world refused even the most minimal acknowledgment of Israel's sovereign rights, But this reasoning expired with the Declaration of Principles of 1993 which not only Israel, but the entire world community, regarded as a significant innovation in Arab and Israeli attitudes. Three years later the peace process is more popular with Israelis than its repeal could possibly be. This, more than anything else explains the difficulties of the Likud in its current encounter with Israeli public opinion.

Netanyahn's puritanical refusal to meet Arafat falls neatly into place. The meeting of "odd conples" has been the most signifi-

How the great abolitionist heroine of the 19th century would weep to learn that at the threshold of the 21st century, black chattel slavery still exists in this world. More than weep; Harriet Tubman's very heart would crack if she knew that almost no one, not even the descendants of the American slaves for whose emancipation she fought so desperately Chattel slavery - the buying and selling of human beings - ended in the West in the 19th century. In the East, especially in the Arabdominated nations of Sudan and Mauritania, slavery abounds. Tens, maybe hundreds of thousands of black Africans have been captured by government troops and freelance slavers and carried off into bondage. Often they are sold openly in "cattle markets." sometimes to domestic owners sometimes to buyers from Chad, Libya and the Persian Guif states.

These people are slaves in every grim sense of the word. They are owned outright by their Arab Moslem masters. Many are branded like cattle, forcibly converted to Islam, lashed if they resist, tortured if they attempt escape. They are put to work as household servants or at hard labor in the fields. Girls and women are routinely raned. Kidnapped boys as young as 15 have been impressed into the Sudanese army to be used as cannon fodder in Khartoum's "holy war" against the black Africans of southern Sudan and as blood banks for older soldiers.

Chattel slavery in Sudan and Mauritania has been conclusively and repeatedly documented by JEFF JACOBY eyewitnesses, human rights investigators, the United Nations, Sudanese and Mauritanian defectors, and a handful of dogged journalists. Yet most Americans know nothing about it. Why? Every schoolchild in America knows that women have been raped in Bosnia," says Charles Jacobs, director of the Bostonbased American Anti-Slavery Group. "Everyone knows the whales have to be saved. But no one seems to realize you can buy a black woman as a slave for as littie as $15 in Khartoum." Jacobs, a management consultant by profession, became a lat-ter-day abolitionist in 1992 after an unsettling conversation with a client who worked out of Senegal. "I had heard these rumors about slavery in the Arab world, I asked him, 'Can it be true?' He said.

has few heroes. In most of America's prestige press, in the boardrooms of the great civil rights organizations, in the offices of famous black leaders, in the corridors of the State Department, one of the most bitter evils of our time evokes only a cowardly silence. Jesse Jackson cannot get involved in fighting slavery, one of his aides told Jacobs, because he "is busy with affirmative action." The NAACP hasn't acted. Trans-Africa hasn't acted. The Chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, US Rep. Don Payne of New Jersey, recently tismissed the slave trade as a "sub. sub issue.".

Only with aching slowness is this blackout being lifted. In May 1995, Jacobs convened an abolitionist congress in Harlem. Last month, a congressional subcom-mittee held a first-ever hearing on slavery in North Africa. But the pace of progress is microscopic. And all the while lens of thousands of human beings are bleeding and dying in their chains.

Make the punishment fit the crime

SOLLY HARRIS

The Palestinian Authority, Egypt and other Arah countries have been insistent in condemning the closure Israel has placed on the territories as a wrongful collective punishment and a "policy of starvation."

The closure undoubtedly canses hardship and is not entirely selective. But we Israelis tend to fight shy of accepting our retaliatory defensive measures as being labeled collective punishment.

Foreign Minister Ehud Barak, in an interview in Cairo last week, is quoted as having said: "'I believe the closure is necessary for security reasons and it should continue as long as there are security reasons which justify it'...He denied that it is collective punishment, as the Palestinians and human rights groups have charged. (The Jerusalem Post, April 5).

We should not fight shy of acknowledging that while the closure is motivated by security reasons, to the extent that it inevitably horts the entire Palestinian population, it is a collective punishment. However, we should simultaneously stress that it is collective punishment for collective responsibility.

For years we have been told by the PLO and the Arab League that the PLO is the sole representative of the Palestinian people. Those who preach terror against Israel and recruit suicide bombers are Palestinians. Consequently, the PLO is responsible for their conduct and has to bear the consequences.

It is a situation analogous to that of Kach supporters and other would-be Goldsteins who threaten and perpetrate acts of violence against Arabs. In such cases, the demand for punishment and containment is leveled not against these groups and individuals; but against the Israeli government, and rightly

IN LIKE manner, we are entitled to demand that the Palestinian Authority takes all the necessary steps to confront and contain their Goldsteins.

> It is a collective punishment for collective responsibility er grand te Admittedly, the challenge which Arafat and the PA have to face is on a far vaster scale than ours. Nonetheless, they have to meet it. Without it, the equation of "land for peace" is nullified.

We have the land and are committed to give it to them a commitment which we have aiready seriously begun to implement, despite its many inherent dangers. They have to give us peace, whatever it takes on their part to ensure it.

They have to make sure that we are able to board a bus, or go shopping in downtown Tel Aviv or any other place in our country without fear and anxiety in our hearts. To love us is not part of the bargain, but to let us live in peace is.

If this bargain is breached, then their society as a whole is responsible and as such must bear the consequences. The deal is collective in both dimensions: responsibility and punishment.

Sooner or later the closure will be removed, in full or in part. To show the extent to which the responsibility for ensuring our freedom from terror falls on them, the PA should be the body which decides which Palestinians are allowed into Israel, subject of course to our veto. They know, or should know, much more about the members of their population than we do.

This would not absolve the PA from responsibility for those who slip through the net for they have to root out those who encourage and plan terror against us, whatever it takes. And it does not absolve us, on our side, from being on constant guard and from taking preventive measures.

So let us not be so defensive and apologetic when the accusing finger of collective punishment is pointed at us. Let us proclaim londly and clearly that as long as the Palestinians do not fulfill their collective responsibility, they have to face the prospect of "collective punishment" which, unfortunately, and much to our dislike, affects their entire society.

Tiven your declaration that there will be a referendum on final-status talks with the Palestinians, and another referendum on the conclusion of negotiations with the Syrians, what exactly will the forthcoming " election decide?

I am judging by deeds, and even his speeches have undergone a change. Let's face it - they are not what they used to be.

You have said "It does not matter what [Arafat] says. Intentions are what is important; reality is more important." Is that still your view?

Yes, sure. If you become convinced that Arafat is not serious in confronting Hamas, don't you think the public deserves a sense of what you will do, if elected, in the event that the peace process unravels?

I don't want to commit myself unnecessarily - it does not depend upon a person. We are in a new age. Nobody can turn his back on history. It is nonsense. We are in a transitional period. The old Middle East has not yet disappeared completely and the new Middle East has not fully arrived. We are in the middle of it, so we still suffer from the rest and we still suffer from the past, and we still cannot see the fruits of the future. It is a transition. It does not depend upon any person, because there is no hope for wars and win-ning wars. If you want to he strong and rich, grow economically, don't grow militarily.

People say [to leaders]: "You go to make wars, occasionally for your own prestige. What about us? Our stomachs are empty, our children are ignorant. We are losing the competition in the world."

In the world, at the times of competition, you have to compete, you cannot fight. There are rules Arafat's recent actions, satellite dishes in Syria and even a history of broken election promises give Shimon Peres cause for optimism.

Do you think that if the Likud is elected, it will - either by design or otherwise - return to Gaza or the West Bank cities?

The point is that the Likud, because of the composition of its parties - two formal factions, Tsomet and Gesher, and an informal faction of the settlement movement] Yesha - will have to renew the settlement policy in the West Bank. This in my judgment will mean the end of peace and the end of a hope for peace. I have said it many times: I aim saying it omelets, but from otherers, you cannot make eggs. They are going to "omelet" the whole West Bank beyoad repair. And thea we shall become a binarional state.

The Likud sees in the autonomy a permanent solution; and we see in the autonomy a step towards a permanent solution.

You used to say: "We will fight terrorists as if there is no peace, and we will go ahead with peoce as if there is no terror." Now it seems that you have changed this thinking, as you are now making further steps in the peace process conditional on the fighting against terror. In fact, you are not going ahead with a pullback from Hebron until Mohammed Deif and others Hamas fugitives are arrested.

I intend to realize all our promises. But I cannot separate dates and events. We have demanded from the Palestinian Anthority that it takes the necessary measures against Hamas. Only now are they beginning to take them, and I believe they will continue. Hebron is basically a Hamas city, and I want to make sure that they are not handing it over to Hamas. That is legitimate and legal. It is my responsibility and I shall do it.

Do you expect Hebron to be transferred before the elections? I don't want to commit myself.

DLD Yasser Arafat mislead Israel into thinking that Hamas would be o peaceful opposition party which he could co-opt, to avoid an Algeria-like civil-war situa-

I don't care about his political structure, I don't want to mix in. For me there is just one measurement: terror and violence. But if you will have one party and 10 rifles, that is what worries me. I want one authority for the use of rifles.

Is it fair to say Arafat has not yet made a strategic decision between peace with Israel and peace with Hamas?

The choice is not between peace with Israel and peace with Hamas. but peace with himself. We insist that he will fight Hamas not because it is a danger to Israel alone - but because it is a danger to him and his authority, and to than everything that one can say. A person can postpone and deviate. But the march of time is like the march of a river. The fish can hardly change that.

Until the closure of the territories, Arafat did not do what he is doing today against Hamas, This suggests to some people that Arafat only does the right thing when he is under massive pressure. Do you agree?

He is beginning to understand, to reach the conclusion that Hamas wants to topple [the Palestinian Authority].

How does the Israeli know that someone caught by the PA today won't be released tomorrow?

The best guarantee is to clarify that this is in Arafat's interest. I think the Palestinian Authority is itself surprised by the depth of the Hamas underground, by the viciousness of their policies.

ISRAEL has been blowing up deporting homes and Palestinians now for over 25 years but it has not seemed to serve as a deterrent. Why should Israel pursue this policy?

We have learned from terrorists who were supposed to commit suicide acts; they said that the only thing that would prevent them is if their families would be affected. So, we are warning people: If you should commit suicide. [you can't] be sure your home will remain intact, and don't be sure that all the members of your family will remain here. That's the only preventive matter we have learned from investigating this. Do you still expect to deport

If there will be a need for it, yes.

I don't think we have to dismantle settlements, I don't think we bave to add settlements. That is my position. No adding and no dismantling. And what about the idea of settlement blocs as a part of a final urrangement?

When you negotiate, there are many suggestions, and I don't have to either exclude or monopolize one suggestion. Every suggestion that got publicity before time is a dead suggestion. It is like opening a film in daylight. You repeatedly say that a Visiting Domascus one is struck by the increasing number of satellite dishes on the rooftops.

Every dish is a hope.

Do you see this maybe as analogous to Eastern Europe in the early '80s when it is said that television presaged the end of the Cold War becouse Eastern Europeans became more oware of what people in the West had and what they lacked?

In Europe, the silver curtain of television was stronger than the Iron Curtain ... The question I ask everyone [in the Middle East] is: If the Far East can change itself, why can't we? Take Thailand, take Indonesia, and Korea.

I heard that in a meeting you hod in Buenos Aires with Argentinian President Menem (who is of Syrian extraction ond who visited Syria), he said Assad was not as shrewd as people give him credit for and that he has brought little to his people.

This is right. The Egyptians have made their separate peace with Israel. The Palestnians have moved ahead without Syria by going to Oslo. The Jordanians have made their own peoce with Israel, and now the Gulf States and some North Africon Arab states are olso moving ohead with Israel without him. What does he have to show? There is still an effort, not an achievement. The Americans are trying very seriously to do so ... 1 saw that some European countries have now extended credit to Iran,

Elections

According to reports, you went to Rabbi Ovadia Yosef and said Shas voters shouldn't vote in the direct election of the prime minister. It seems that the Labor Party position is to discourage haredim while encouraging Israeli Arabs to vote in this election. Is it true? If so, what kind of message does this send in o democratic sense?

First, I never said it. I did not come to negotiate, I came to congratulate him on Passover and that's it. Secondly, the religious have to decide if they are on the side of peace or not. We stand for peace and security. And the same goes for the Arabs. They have to decide, they are part and parcel of the Israeli citizenship, [Just as 1] wouldn't discriminate against anyone because they are religious. I would not discriminate against anyone because he is an Arab. We call on the whole population to participate in the election.

Would you like to see o deol with Syria by November, when Secretary of State Warren Christopher is, by his own admission, due to retire?

If possible, yes, Are you optimistic, even though talks have essentially stopped for now?

I sent a message with the Americans to Assad. Assad says he wants peace in '96. I said if we want a deal in '96, we have to fly high and fast, not low and slow, This means that we have to negotiate differently. We have to raise the level of negotiations to the top leadership of the countries ... I got a reply [from Assad via the Americans, saying]: "Yes, we can meet but I can't say the date." ... I want to see what is the pace of his movement.

Do you preclude the June 4, 1967, borders with the Syrians? Yes, but I don't want to conduct negotiations this way.

Do you rule out o national unity government with the Likud ofter the election?

If the Likud will accept our program, why not? The problem is not the government, the problem is the program, I think I am the best-positioned person in this country to serve the young generation because what I am correins ation, because what I am carrying is a message, not an ambition, This is my deep conviction. I think there is a great opportunity to save this country from unnecessary wars. This is what I am doing. The rest is secondary.

You said recently that "Israelis need more Yiddishkeit, ond Diaspora Jews need more Hebrew." Do you want to enrich the Jewish curriculum in Israeli schools? What will be the nature of a new partnership between Israel and the Diaspora in o postpeace Israel?

First, we have to set a new agenda for the coming 50 to 100 years of Jewish life. The first agenda, which will reach its 100th antiversary next year, is completely fulfilled, better than Herzl ever dreamed. Now we need a new dream. The new dream is once we have established our territorial concentration, we have to build our spiritual center. On the agenda will be to gather wbatever is Jewish - historically, universally, and intellectually - and bring it to Israel. So the agenda will be to build a spiritual center for a Jewish future in Jerusalem, in Israel.

Second, if until now Israel was an answer to Jewish tragedies and the Holocaust, Israel must become an attraction for inviting the Jewish youth to live here or with us wherever they are. For that reason, the main answer to the ques-tion of "Who is a Jew?" is not if your parents were Jewish, but if your children will be Jewish. For that reason, education will become the major instrument of the relations between the Diaspora and us.

We have to attract not just material support, but Jewish intellectual talents wherever they are. Israel* went against the tide and succeeded for the sole reason that we are a believing nation, because our moral fiber exceeded our imperial strategies, so to speak. This is what we have to do for the future.

Analysts: Managers should brace for risks of corporate raids

MANAGERS of publicly-traded Israeli companies should contemplate tactical measures to protect themselves from the risk of hostile takeovers in the future, a US analyst said yesterday.

The warning came following the Scitex-Gilo affair, which has increased local awareness to the possibility of US-style corporate raids taking place here.

Fears of a hostile takeover are expected, according to the analyst, to subject local managers to closer scrutiny from controlling shareholders and induce managers to improve company performance, lest they be personally punished by the markets.

Local market analysts, meanwhile, said the majority of Israeli managers have no reason to fear hostile takeovers, since shareholder control of the companies is very concentrated, making it almost impossible to take over a firm without the owners' consent.

According to Shmuel Gortler, managing director of Clal Finance and investments, less than 10 percent of the country's public companies are at a potential risk of a

GALIT LIPKIS BECK

"Skirmishes between existing shareholders are more common in Israel than hostile takeovers, since in many cases the major shareholders control more than 50% of a company's shares," Gortler said.
"The holding of a large proportion of the shares by majority-share holders prevents hostile takeovers."

Gortler, whose company is held by Clal, which is also an interested party in Scitex, refused to discuss specifically the hostile takeover hid for Scitex by American-Israeli entrepreneur Davidi Gilo

The latter has informed Scitex owners of his intentions to seize control of the Herzliya based high-tech company, despite the decision by the board and principal shareholders to reject his proposal to purchase the company's shares for a total of $856 million.

Scitex's major shareholders -International Paper Company, PEC Israel Economic Corp., Discount Investment and Clal Electronics Industries - collectively hold some 36% of issued and outstanding Scitex shares.

Dr. Shmuel Goldman, an expert on the local capital market, pre-dicted hostile takeovers "will not become a common phenomenon here over the next decade," since at the moment only a few compa-nies, like Scitex and Teva, are at risk of a takeover of this kind. Many small companies are fami-ly-owned, while the larger ones are controlled by a few major investors, usually the large con-glomerates, like Clal, IDB and the Bank Hapoalim group, he said. "Israel is not like the US, where interested parties may control only a small percentage of a company," he said. "Here, the majority of firms are smaller than in the US and concentration of control in them is therefore high," he said. Hostile takeovers, according to Goldman, may become more common "perhaps in a decade or two," after family-owned compa-nies are split up and pass down a generation or so.

Citing an example, Goldan said Ellern used to be a family-owned company, which was bequeathed and shortly afterwards was sold hy one of the inheritors to Migdal,

TEL AVIV STOCK MARKET

FELICE MARANZ

SHARES sank yesterday amid investor concern that US stocks, including Israeli companies traded in New York, will decline after a stronger-than-expected US jobs report Friday fueled concern for higher interest rates.

The Maof Index fell 1.64 percent to 202.46, and the Two-Sided lodex dropped 1.50% to 192.89. Of 991 issues tradiog across the exchange, oearly three times as many shares fell as rose.

Declines were led by shares in Teva Pharmaceuticals, which fell 1.25%. Tevs was the most active share on the exchaoge, with NIS 5.6m. worth of shares changing hands.

'It went up too much last week," said Shlomo Meir, fund manager at Tel Aviv investment firm Central Securities.

Teva gained 8% in Tel Aviv yesterday, following Friday's jump in Teva's American Depositary Receipts to 41 7/8.

The Tel Aviv Stock Exchange will be closed today and tomorrow for the last day of Pessah. Shares fell across the hoard "hecause of fear about Wall Street," said Meir. He added that "there's no douht that if Wall Street goes up, we will too" when trading resumes on Thursday.

WORLD MARKET ROUNDUP

HONG KONG (Reuter) - Tokyo and prices might recover after the share prices closed sharply lower market saw New York's reaction yesterday, with investors growing more worried about a slide on Wall Street later in the day.

Brokers said Japaoese investors feared US interest rates might be headed higher after Friday's announcement of an unexpectedly strong addition of 140,000 con-farm johs to the American workforce in March.

Taiwan stocks extended their recent gains on signs of revived ioterest from overaeas while South Korean shares were little changed despite renewed tension with North Korea. Bourses in most of Eruope, as well as Hong Kong. Sydney and Wellington, were all closed for Faster. Tokyo's 225-share Nikkei average fell 271.60 points, or 1.25 percent, to 21,424.24.

Brokers said that selling emerged on fears that the jobs data showed a stronger than anticipated US economy, and that pointed to higher interest rates.

The increase in jobs was more than twice the rise forecast hy economists and was the second hig upturn in as many months. Some brokers said, however, to the jobs data. The US market was closed on Friday. In Taiwan, financial shares led the way as the weighted index rose 18.67 points, or 0.33%, to 5,599.80. The market, after gaining more than 400 points on Friday and Saturday, opened lower on profit-taking but the strength of the financial sector helped it to a higher close. Taiwan shares have been aided by expectations that Morgao Stanley would add the weighted index to its worldwide indices. Other major Western brokerages have also expressed renewed interest in the bourse following the island's presideotial election last month and an easing of tension with China. In Seoul, the stock index ended at a provisional 877.03, up 0.17 points, though declines led advances hy a four-to-three margin.

Brokers said that investors shrugged off North Korea's latest incursion into the demilitarized zone that separates the two states though political concerns remained ahead of the April 11 general elections.

WALL STREET REPORT

NEW YORK (AP) - Stocks dropped sharply yesterday, after Friday's unexpectedly strong employmeot data removed the last shred of hope that the Federal Reserve might soon lower shortterm interest rates.

But the major iodexes took their hits early and held steady for the remainder of the day, eveo as bond prices deteriorated in the afternoon.

Oo Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 88.51 points to close at 5,594.37, having retraced a good portion of its 140point loss in late morning. A huying spurt in the final 30 minutes lifted the Dow about 30 points.

Although the major iodexes were broadly and significantly lower, some market analysts said an eveo more severe reaction was still possible - especially as stock investors get a more definitive look at first-quarter earnings.

"I think there's the potential for further downside," said Kathryn Lunstrum, investment strategist at Duff and Phelps Equity Research in Chicago "Eventually, the impact of higher rates is going to catch up with us and precipitate a further slowing in the economy."

Stocks dropped sharply at the opening in reaction to a Labor Department report released Friday, which showed that a strong 140,000 confarm payroll johs were created in March.

However, the US ucemployment rate edged up to 5.6 percent in Fehruary, Labor said.

The bond market had a chance Friday to respond to the March employment data, but the stock market, which was closed io observance of Good Friday, did not.

On Friday, the loog bond down fell nearly two points, and it lost aoother 9/16 point yesierday morning before closing down 21/ 32 point and yielding 6.88%. Declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 7 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 2,371 down, 322 up and 436 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 411.79m. shares as of 4 pm, vs. 382.02m. io the previous session.

Cantona goal puts United six points clear

LONDON (Reuter) - Manchester United moved six points clear of Newcastle United at the top of the English premier league yesterday when Eric Cantona's seventh goal in eight games gave them a 1-0 home win over lowly Coventry.

Cantona's 47th minute closerange strike not only gave United three more vital points in their hunt for the title but also increased the pressure on Newcastle to win at Blackburn in their game last night scheduled to end after press time.

The victory moved Alex Ferguson's learn on to 73 points with four matches to play in the title chase, while Newcastle has 67 with six games to go, including last night's.

Liverpool, whose championship hopes were virtually extinguished when it lost 1-0 at Coventry on Saturday, moved on to 65 points as goals from Stan Collymore and John Barnes gave them a 2-0 win over West Ham.

While the title seems destined for either Old Trafford or St James's Park, the battle to avoid the drop intensified as the bottom two teams both won.

chances of staying up by coming from behind to beat Chelsea 2-1, while Queens Park Rangers climbed above Coventry on goal difference after beating Everton

Bolton stayed bottom but moved to within a point of Coventry who slipped from 18th to 19th behind QPR after losing at Old Trafford.

Wimhledon virtually guaranteed themselves another season in the Premier League after

IFA appealing court decision , on Hap. RG-Taiba incident

ORI LEWIS

THE Israel Football Association is appealing to its supreme tribunal the decision handed down by the same body's lower disciplinary panel over the incident between Hapoel Ramat Gan and Hapoel Taiba which took place two weeks ago. ...-The disciplinary panel last week ruled that the match between the two clubs should be replayed behind closed doors. The original match at Ramat Gan's home ground in Givatayim was stopped by referee Shabtai Nahmias in the 68th minute after Ramat Gan's captain, Ynval Naim, assaulted one of the linesmen. The Ramat Ganis were leading 2-0 at the time, but an assault on an official requires the referee to terminate the match instantly. The immediate resulting action is also an automatic 2-0 loss against the offending team. Further disciplinary action is then a matter for the IFA to consider. ruled that Naim had indeed at-

Terrorists may try to pose as settlers'

THE police have intelligence information on plans by terrorists to disguise themselves as settlers in order to enter the country and smuggle in explosives, despite the closure, Inspector-General Assaf Hefetz revealed yesterday.

In response, he said, the army is carefully checking all vehicles entering the country from the territories - even ones with yellow Israeli license plates.

"The searches being carried out are a result of the closure, and information that terrorists might try to disguise themselves as settlers to smuggle themselves and explosives into the country,"

Man apparently killed by snake

MAGEN David Adom yesterday issued a warning about how to handle snakebites after a 22-yearold guard at a youth camp near Ness Harim outside Jerusalem was found dead, apparently from snakebite.

A mobile intensive care unit from the Jerusalem station was alerted by the man who was to replace the night-shift guard. He had found him lying down, without a heartbeat, and signs of snakebite on his leg. The MDA team found the characteristic signs of snakebite and determined that he had died several hours earlier. The exact cause of death has yet to be declared officially.

MDA noted that during the spring and summer, high grasses provide good hiding places for snakes after their winter hibernation. The glands of the poisonous ones are full of venous, thus they are likely to attack their victims

several times and cause serious

MDA (101) should be called immediately in the case of s snakebite. Until they arrive, a snakebite victim should not be moved, and should be prevented from walking or standing, and not allowed to eat or drink. They should be placed on the ground and be kept completely still so the venom does not spread through the body quickly. The affected limb should be bound to the body as if it were a fracture.

The snakebite itself should not be cut or cauterized, nor should the venom be sucked out. Tourniquets' should not be attached, and the snakebite should

Royal Jordanian Airlines opens Tel Aviv office

Messala removed from

TEL Aviv's Rehov Shalom Aleichem took on a festive air yesterday, as a Jordanian folklore group entertained local residents and visiting tourists with a selec-tion of music and dancing to mark the opening of the first Royal Jordanian Airline office here.

Nader Dehabi, president and chief executive officer of the Jordanian airline, whose subsidiary Royal Wings made its maiden commercial flight to Israel on Sunday, stressed that Royal Jordanian was interested in cooperation, rather than competition with El Al.

We're not here to compete with anybody. We are here to make travel easier for the people of Israel." Dehabi told a news conference shortly after the official opening, attended by Mayor Roni Mile.
